Not illustrated. 1848 Excerpt: ... and cheering words to every method of reform, buoyant in hope amid all vicissitudes, fearing only the crippling influence of fear, trusting Providence perfectly, Dr. Channing looked steadily forward to the brightening future. The following letters will show how truly he described himself as always young for liberty. July 28, 1839. My faith in the progress of truth, humanity, and piety, is in no degree shaken; but the state of the world joins with all history in showing me that the great designs of Providence unfold slowly--that is, slowly to us creatures of a day--and that another perhaps very distant age is to witness that triumph of the spirit of Christianity which we all expect. We all see that civil liberty has not produced that sudden melioration and exaltation of human nature which was confidently hoped; nor has religious liberty borne all the fruits we hoped. Still, a good work is going on. Slavery, and bigotry, and worldliness, will not reign for ever. November 30, 1840f. In this country and England, the conservative tendency seems gaining strength; and yet in the changed tone of conservatism, even when it triumphs, you see a homage to a higher tendency. The elevation of the great body of the people cannot be winked out of sight as formerly; and I trust the time is coming when all parties will be compelled to propose it distinctly. Boston, October 24th, 1840 J. Mr. Robertson gave a noble character to the Westminster. What gratified me particularly in that work was its enlarged, candid, liberal, tone of thought. It was just to Conservatism, just to the past--rare merits among us Liberals. To the Rev. Henry Channing. f To Gteorge Combe, Esq. J To Miss Harriet Martineau.

Perhaps we have been as bigoted as our opponents; nor is it to be wondered...
